Overview & Objectives

Course Overview

Discover how food fraud and defense has been incorporated in various standards, like, BRCGS Food Safety, and FSSC 22000 Version 6. Both deals with intentional adulteration, designed to yield either economic gain for the criminal or to cause harm to the consumer.

It is inevitable that food businesses will need to implement some form of TACCP (Threat assessment) & VACCP (Vulnerability assessment) systems.

Navigating vulnerability and threat assessments can be complex, but our workshop offers a comprehensive methodology to guide you through. Gain insights and tools to effectively safeguard your products and consumers.

Course Objectives

The course will equip the delegates with:

- An understanding of food fraud and food defense, including definitions, differences between TACCP, VACCP and HACCP
- An understanding of standard requirements (BRCGS and FSSC)
- Practical application to conduct a VACCP and TACCP assessment
- Practical insights to assist with detection and prevention of fraud and food defense, including the recall process
